Giroux Glass Inc. appointed Nataline Lomedico as chief executive officer, as of Jan. 1, 2015, succeeding Anne-Merelie Murrell, who continues as chairman of the board, according to a company release.

Lomedico has worked in the construction industry in finance and accounting roles for over 24 years. She has served as treasurer, controller and chief financial officer, directly responsible for all financial aspects since 2000, at Giroux. The woman-owned company is currently ranked Number 11 on Engineering News Record Magazine's list of top 20 U.S. firms in glazing and curtain wall for 2014.

"Nataline has been an integral part of this growth for the past 14 years, and is the perfect choice as our next CEO," said Murrell. "Her strong leadership will build upon our previous successes and take us into our exciting future."

"I am honored by the trust that Anne-Merelie and my partners have placed in me, and as CEO I look forward to continued success in the years to come," says Lomedico.

Murrell served as chief executive officer since her purchase of the company from its founder, Louis Giroux, in 1991. A real-estate investor with an interest in renovating neglected properties in the downtown L.A. area surrounding the USC campus, Murrell purchased the glass company as part of an investment in six buildings. She grew the company to over 400 employees.

Lomedico is committed to cutting-edge technology, top-quality service, customer satisfaction and nurturing Giroux's strong culture of ownership, according to the release. "I welcome the day we become 100 percent employee owned, now scheduled to happen within the next seven years. I look forward to nurturing our growth and financial strength to create a strong future for our next generation of employee owners of Giroux."
